

What Can We Do as "We the People"?

- We the people will read and study the Constitution and ponder upon it.
- We the people will keep the laws of the land and look to God as our Law-giver and the Source of our liberty.
- We the people will reflect more intently on the meaning and importance of the Constitution and the necessity to adhere to its principles.
- We the people will teach our children and help them learn the precepts so they will be able to defend it.
- We the people will strive to be a righteous and moral people.
- We the people will not seek to receive what we have not earned by our own labor.
- We the People will remember that the government owes us nothing.
- We the people will learn the principles contained in the Constitution and be willing to abide by its precepts.
- We the people will become involved in civic affairs and will search and seek for honest and wise leaders.
- We the people will influence decisions with our vote, our letters and advice.
- We the people will follow the counsel given by President Abraham Lincoln when he said, "Let it [the Constitution] be taught in schools, in seminaries, and in colleges, let it be preached from the pulpit, proclaimed in legislative halls, and enforced in courts of justice. And, in short, let it become the political religion of the nation."
